Missouri Weekly Hay Summary

Record high temperatures, severe storms, flooding, tornadoes and snow were some of the words used in Missouri's weather this week. Hay movement remains slow as those having to buy hay are just purchasing what they have to get by for a while longer. As mentioned last week, many new offerings coming to the market each day. The general feeling is that as long as there's not a foot of snow that comes and stays on the ground for a couple months the supply should carry farmers through this feeding year, but of course given the recent weather no one is celebrating yet. Hay supply is moderate to light, demand moderate and prices steady to weak.
